Assessing students' ability to detect melanomas using standardized patients and moulage (Revision 1)

Claudia Hernandez, MD¹; Robin Mermelstein, PhD²; June K. Robinson, MD³; Rachel Yudkowsky, MD, MHPE⁴

AFFILIATIONS: ¹University of Illinois at Chicago, Department of Dermatology (MC 624), 808 South Wood Street, Room 376 CME, Chicago, IL 60612; ²Institute for Health Research and Policy and Department of Psychology, University of Illinois at Chicago, 1747 W. Roosevelt Road (MC 275), Chicago, IL 60608; ³Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine, Department of Dermatology, 132 E. Delaware #5806, Chicago, IL 60611; ⁴University of Illinois at Chicago, Department of Medical Education 963 CME, 808 S. Wood Street MC 591, Chicago, IL 60612

CORRESPONDING AUTHOR: Claudia Hernandez, MD, University of Illinois at Chicago, Department of Dermatology (MC 624), 808 South Wood Street, Room 376 CME, Chicago, IL 60612; Phone: (312) 996-6966; Fax: (312) 996-1188; E-mail: claudiah@uic.edu

Funding Source: Dr. Hernandez is the recipient of the Dermatology Foundation Women’s Health Career Development Award which partially supported this research.

Publishing disclosure statement: Drs. Hernandez, Robinson, Mermelstein, and Yudkowsky have no financial disclosures to make in regards to this manuscript.

Prior Presentation: This article was an accepted poster at the AAD 2011 Annual Meeting.

Abstract word count: 244

Capsule summary word count: 65

Text word count: 2,604 1,944

Table: 2

Figures: 2
Number of References: 16

Reprints: Not available from the author.